

The Case for Reparations to Descendants of Enslaved People

Have you been wondering what Reparations are all about? The ACLU believes the issue of reparations should be seriously considered by all Americans and some institutions have already taken action. On October 18, 2019, the Princeton Theological Seminary announced it had pledged to spend $27 million reparation on scholarships and other initiatives to address its historical ties to slavery, in what appears to be the biggest effort of its kind.

The Racial Justice Task Force of the Unitarian Universalist Congregation of Princeton has invited local attorney and activist, Caroline Clarke, Esq., to give her presentation with time for Q&A:

Date and Time: Thursday, October 29, 2020 at 7 pm on zoom:

Please register in advance for this meeting:

<https://zoom.us/meeting/register/tJltcO2gpjssHNz23c1dpPKH43ByguyYI8re>

After registering, you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the meeting.

Caroline Clarke's lifelong work is advocacy for the under-served. An attorney for over 20 years, she has worked in various non-profit, governmental and quasi-governmental agencies, including Disability Rights NJ, the Division on Civil Rights and the Department of Labor & Workforce Development. Caroline serves as a board member of Princeton's NIOT, and has also served as a board member for both Trenton and Princeton-area schools.

This presentation is free and open to the public.